Land We Abandoned Can Be Made To Pay

THOUSANDS of acres of land lying idle and abandoned in Southern states can be turned into profitable hay fields and pastures by the use of kudzu and sericea, R. Y. Bailey, regional Soil Conservation Service agronomist, recently stated. Both are perennial legumes; both grow well under unfavorable conditions and both are profitable hay and grazing crops. Little known until recent years, they promise to become an important source of income to Southern farmers, Bailey

The South, he concluded, now has the smallest acreage of cropland per capita of any important farming region in the country and as a consequence Southern farmers are often required to use land which in other areas might be considered too poor or too steep for farming. These lands erode rapidly under cultivation and produce low crop yields. The logical use for these lands then is a good forage crop which will yield abundantly, protect the soil, require infrequent plowing, and survive dry spells. Kudzu and sericea meet cluding a much greater use of these requirements successfully.

two-horse farmer with plen-A ty of determination looked at his big hay crop and then viewed with a great deal of anxiety his barn which could not hold the hay in prospect, even were it baled. Undaunted, Monroe Garrett went to work. Result: A hay shed which served his purpose constructed for $1.35 cash outlay. Mr. Garrett of Jefferson County placed four tons of loose hay in this improvised structure. He will handle the hay only one time, moving it from the field into the barn. There will be no costs for baling or loss of labor in moving the feed again. Waste due to handling will be eliminat-

Mr. Garrett has arranged the shed so that he is able to place boards around the sides by which he controls the feeding of the stock. The shed has a wood floor and is placed on skids so that it can be moved any place on the farm desired.

J. B. Wilson, Extension agricultural engineer, who recently viewed this structure, said that with the increasing hay and livestock in Alabama such a shed should fit well into the farm plan. He pointed out that there was no justification for baling hay except where it was to be sold on the market. The barn Mr. Garrett built would reduce baling and handling costs; such a shed can be constructed cheaper than hay can be baled. Capacity could range anywhere from 4 to 50 new source of income—it is peaches. Known as Chilco peaches, farmers of the county harvested them from 500 acres of trees this year; next year will harvest them from 1500 acres, and in 1943 from 2500 acres.

Now Or Never

VOU may save a life or a hos-I pital bill or prevent a delay in farm operations by simply picking up that board full of rusty nails out by the cow lot. You have probably been meaning to put a new platform on the well or tack down the steps or discard the old hay rope. Now is the best time to do it—not tomorrow. * * *

people brush their teeth?

You might say that people brush their teeth to keep them clean--or to make them sparkle--or because their dentists told them to.

But, few people brushed their teeth until advertising told them it was important.

In more ways than most people realize, advertising has promoted health and happiness in the course of selling its wares.

And at the same time, by increasing business, it has helped make more jobs--so more people can enjoy the things it offers for sale.
